PRICE THREEPENCE.

PRINCE OF WALES OPERA HOUSE.

SUBSCRIPTION SEASON FOR 1865.

COMMENCING MONDAY, May 1st, 1865.

Under the patronage of His Excellency the Governor, and Lady Young.

Having effected engagements with nearly all the first instrumentalists in Australia, and secured the services of the first vocalists in the colony, he feels certain that the operatic representations will be as perfect as it is possible to make in this colony, and cannot be surpassed out of the large capitals of Europe. The immense success which the opera has met with during the past year in Victoria and New Zealand has encouraged the Libretto to make this additional season, feeling sure that in Sydney the excellence of the entertainment will be appreciated.

VIVAT REGINA.

MADAME SOHIER'S WAXWORK EXHIBITION. The attention of the public is particularly directed to the following verification of the truthfulness of the likeness of Morgan, and also to the great usefulness of this institution, as there is little doubt in the minds of the Libretto of leading to the identification and death of this notorious character.

"MORGAN'S LAST DEEDS." "One of the witnesses states that he knew his victim's murderer was at that time in the likeness of MADAME SOHIER'S WAXWORKS. The man says the figure in the Waxwork is Morgan, and he knew him to be Morgan before he mentioned his name."

It is rumored that England and France have addressed to the Courts of Vienna and Berlin an energetic protest.

latter, or rather the Prime Minister, seems less zealous

[illegible][illegible]

Recently made a stay of several months in the United States, whether he had gone for the purpose of visiting his friends, or of collecting materials for the work in question.

From the data furnished by Dr. Evans, it appears that his attempts at military action on the part of the North were still more evident in the utter absence of all provision for the sick and wounded, and the want of proper clothing, sufferings endured by the army for want of proper clothing, hospital comforts, and appliances for the relief of the sick, a group of ladies belonging to the most influential and influential families of the North, who were stimulated by the example of the heroic Florence Nightingale, in the Crimea, to emulate the efforts of that noble nurse, and to organize the Central British forces in the German campaign. To this end, the ladies drew up and published an Appeal, addressed to the Government, and to the public, in which they stated their purpose for the purpose of forming a regular association, having for its twofold aim the preservation of the health of the soldiers, and the relief of the sick and wounded, and the organization of ambulances, hospitals, and supplies, and everything needed for the cure of the sick and the relief of the wounded. This Appeal was signed by the ladies, and the fair sex that has ever taken place in the New World.

was held on the 25th of April, 1861, in the great hall of the Cooper Institute, and was presided over by Mr. Hamlin, assisted by Mr. Briggs, Mr. May, Mr. Phelps, Mr. Beecher, Dr. Bellows and Dr. Bethune; and the venerable and distinguished philanthropist, Dr. Mott; all of whom addressed the meeting, setting forth the necessity of immediate action in order to prevent disease and mortality in the camp, and to palliate the suffering of the soldiers.

Such was the enthusiasm of this meeting, and grew the aptitude for business manifested by its leaders, that before it separated the proposed association was regularized, its officers appointed, its scope defined, and its mode of action distinctly laid down. The new body, which had been called into existence, was now organized, and consisted of about thirty members, though composed of women, had preferred, from motive of convenience, to choose its principal officers from the other sex.

Dr. Mott, who stands at the head of the medical profession in this State, was made president; the Rev. Dr. Bellows, of the University of the City, was chosen Secretary, and the Secretary-general.

including General Scott, hastened to curl themselves around the new assignment. The new assignment endeavored to deal in concert with the Medical Bureau, the official organ of the Government for all that concerned the physical health of the cities of the North, and the various Indian agencies, and to cope with the necessities of a struggle at once so colossal and so sudden, was extremely jealous of the Commission, which it regarded as an interloper and a rival, and of the fact that it was so open to the ingenuities and obstructions of the various tribes. Many of the tribes, however, were so friendly to the Commission so found itself compelled to break off the attempt to unite with that body in a combination, and thereupon followed a perfectly independent action. The Central Commission soon found itself the head of fifteen sub-commissions established in the principal cities of the North, and of no less than 35,000 local societies, all of which were zealously at work, collecting and disseminating information in kind, making list, developing, investigating, and reporting.

ing days, the lines of wagons that rumbled heavily on the ice that, bringing the gifts of the people of the State far and wide, were five kilometres in length. The wagons, generally driven by the farmer or mechanic, had done most tows getting them filled, contained grain, cattle, beef, hams, bacon, dried fish, candles, wax, preserves, foodstuffs, wood, machinery, nails, furniture, paper, jewelry, cloth, cotton goods, boots and shoes, pianos, watches, clocks, arms, sledges, baskets, pottery, lacquer, wooden wares—something, in fact, of everything produced in the State of Michigan.

else, one can fancy the birds picking at them. Things, as we might say, are not what they seem. The artist's trick is to make so many lovely substitutions of veils for broadcloth, which is occasionally attempted by innovating spirits, the velvet looking prettier than its rival that one would fain see it generally adopted.

On the day given over to Saturday last, at the Royal, at which the Imperial family, the diplomatists and a wonderful gathering of fashion, art, science, literature, the Press, Polish refugees, and Italian dandies were brought into contact with the ministerial, official, and aristocratic world, has been the most successful of the season. Prince Napoleon, his sympathies and antipathies are well known, nearly three thousand invitations, including people of class, opinion, and nationality, except priests and Russians, may possibly have been sent out. The Emperor himself, in company with General Turra, and so many English intimate friends; but nothing could be apparent cordiality of the Imperial pair and their hosts. It was the first grand ball given by the Emperor and Empress, and the occasion was so arranged that they would accept themselves of the duties, Princess Kikuko, naturally blent in manner, disliking ceremony, and Princess Chitioh being extremely so, and always trying to run away if any one else would. The Emperor and Empress, however, were so much grace and amiability, had such pleasant remarks ready for each guest, and welcomed everyone so much cordially, that the affair has been a triumph for their reputation as hosts. The Palais-Royal is the beautiful residence, and the Emperor and Empress have a great love of art, and a very accomplished musician, and has spent immense sums in the art of painting, with which he has filled the two-and-a-half splendour reception-rooms of that noble palace, all of which are open to the public, and the collection of pictures by the Prince is contained in exactly their usual order. A splendid entrance-hall was converted into a theatre flowering shrubs; flowers being most tastefully distributed through all the rooms. The lighting was magnificently arranged, and the music was played by a band of quietude. The Parle could furnish, and the supper — of artistic choice. On this splendid affair, at which display of jewellery was unusually magnificent, the royalties of the ladies as lavishly time as such things are given in place, instead of the usual 100,000 francs being in place, the Prince spent £120,000, the supper alone cost £500, the rest being spent in the lights.

The ceremony of the opening of the Legislative Assembly in the first old Medeval Hall of the Old Palace called the Salles des Etois, on Wednesday, was unusual pomp. The hall, splendidly fitted up with crimson velvet and gold; the Emperor's great gold chair and a smaller one for Prince Napoleon, being placed side by side under a canopy of red velvet and gold. The Emperor's throne, partitioned off with velvet drapery to the right of the throne, containing gold chairs self and the princesses, the steps of the Throne bespart for Cardinals, Bishops, Ministers, Generals, I. Officers, and ladies, and the benches for the ladies, with crimson benches for Senators, deputies, the Faculty of Law, University, &c., the Ambassadors having the gallery, with their ladies just beyond, the pages of the various Ministries opposite the Ambassadors, and the ladies of the Court, and the Courtiers, all round the vast, oblong Hall, crammed ladies, who were sadly persecuted by the bland and not inflexible ushers, who kept up a perpetual squeaking and pushing, utterly regardless of criminal conduct in ladies, and of the feelings of the crowd of wearyers of that uncomfortable hall. By 11 o'clock the Hall was alive with uniforms and breeches, and the galleries crammed to their capacity. By 12, the masses of costumes below, behind a vast fringe of red velvet, and the ranks of Court Gentles, behind the Throne, making a cent border and background to the whole. A few other woman could mount them, she turned round to the gathering, and made one of those deep, smooth, curves which she always cut out of the air with a manner of admiration. The Emperor and his party had scarcely taken their seats when she ushered announced the Emperor. The masses of courtiers, of quaint old-world costumes, were distinctly defined in the special locality, and a hush of expectation that was so clearly perceptible throughout the gathering, rendered the scene somewhat, very striking and impressive. His Majesty accompanied by Prince and Princess, and the Emperor's wife, richly adorned in the Legion of Honor, and the Emperor wearing six miniature orders, followed the group of officers and chamberlains up the middle of the reception being pretty good, but not enthusiastic. The Emperor's wife, who was seated in the front of a night hall that proves how difficult it is, even for a Crowned, to get rid of the grip of rheumatism, and himself on the throne; the Grand Master of the Interior, the old Duke of Camboursie, desiring the blessing of Heaven, had caused the Emperor's Chamberlain, and slowly unrolled it, amidst a silence as perceptible to the ear as sound. The anxiety to catch the first utterance of the Oracle was evident to every eye; and the increasing satisfaction, as each word proceeded, was equally manifest. It was evident, The Emperor did not appear to be, who have so often heard him, to be perfectly at the possibly the knowledge that, under all genres of discipline the priestly gauntlet has been definitively done. The Emperor, however, was not to be deceived; the powerful body he has favoured and petted, against his dynasty, may have affected even his inner nerves. At all events, he made four times, a slight "ple" seeming to mistake a word and correcting it, "ple" a strong, I believe, he had not the least burst of passion which accompanied the reading, have re-assured him. The passage recommending of peace, and those which paid the usual tribute of Italy to the French army, were equally applauded by the French and the Italian troops. The Emperor, and both the soldiers and the people, were maintaining the spiritual influence of the priesthood to the supremacy of the civil power, were received with a tumult of applause; at the latter of two declamations, at this point, the Emperor only shouting, Vive l'Empereur! at the top of their voices, waving their tri-colored hats in the exuberance of appreciation. On the conclusion of the Speech the Emperor, who was dressed in the uniform of a general, hearty, and twice-renewed. The speech of the Emperor, General Goyon, the Grand Marshal, and the Emperor's Commissioner, was declared, by His Majesty's command, to be the Session of 1865 was opened, and invited the various members of the State to lend their efforts for the advancement of public well. The Emperor then quitted the hall, and, as he had entered it, but smiling as he was looking through the balcony at the Emperor's Assembly standing, and making full use of its lungs.

honors. After the Emperor had left with his suite, the Empress and little Prince, followed as before, to the departure amidst a chorus of graciosa. The little Prince, in returning, was accompanied by the Emperor and yet full of conscious dignity, seemed immensely amused and delight the assemblage. Everybody by word, laughing and bowing, to see the little creature moved on by his mother's side, and all of them in the parental kiss on him. An immense crowd of people square outside and the adjoining streets, and sometimes a lively satisfaction in seeing the carriages and that of male and female friary drive by through the door of the fathers that had formed the badge along the road.

The principal domestic events of the week have been the measure of the recalcitrant Bishops by the Council and the letters of praise and felicitation addressed by the Emperor to the recalcitrant Bishops. The Emperor, in the text, the cry of the Council, the complaint with absolute submission, as "a rule of life" was to trouble their heads as to its application. Considering that the famous utterance of the pope was a mere "ex cathedra" exclusion of priests from civil tribunals, and that the pope himself was a devotee of ecclesiastical toleration of schismatic, Mohammedan, and even Jewish worship, liberty of conscience, and of the gains which the world has made since the "reigning of terror" of the papacy, it is not surprising that it is ingenuously, but quite truthfully, called the famous Encyclical, let alone the latest papal bull, which is in relation to it, viz., that it has been spending the winter in Rome, has been in athletic and warlike behavior, is tripping, and is about to be despatched to the East by General Le Marmora as donee two days later, by a transparent incognito understood. throughout the monarchy will be inclined to a more realistic view of the situation. The country, though, though excessively bogged with reforming and financial projects, has found time to institute — that of the Mexican Empire, which is six classes — knight, officer, commander, grand cross, and grand crown, with a smaller number of knights is unlimited, and fixed at 280, commanders at 100; grand officers crosses, 25; and grand cross with collar, 12. The latter have been sent to the Emperor second to Victor Emmanuel. The others are the knights of the Order of the Azules, and knights for whom the new sovereign has kindness.

The Queen of Spain has presented to the world about four millions sterling. The bill of the Emperor's coronation, which is the property of the Crown, reserves the royal treasury dependencies, the museum of painting the royal museum of arms, the Alhambra of the Alcazar of Seville as the perpetual patrimony of the nation, and the Alcazar of Seville as the kind to the State for indefinite sale. Of the sale, 75 per cent. are to be paid into the treasury and 25 per cent. into the treasury household. The Queen's resolve has been confirmed by the Cortes, and the Queen, so profoundly embarrassed, and for the first time, has been able to give to the Signor, Barzellano's project of a forced loan, owing to the strenuous resistance we have had to have opposed to the measure, the Queen's spontaneous sacrifice, and her Majesty and devotion are pouring in upon her Madrid towns of the kingdom. EDUCATION OF DISSIDENTERS IN CHURCH

An interesting discussion on the education of science class¹ took place at a meeting of the Archdeacon Board, on the 17th

John Fawcett moved a resolution to let the grants of the board should be made on the basis of the "conscience" of the school board, without any consideration of the fact of whether the conscientious claimants were acting upon. In some poor localities, where a national school existed, and the adoption of the course he recommended would be more likely to Dissenters. The doctrines of the English were, and would continue to be, taught in their schools; and all those who were appointed as Dissenters should be proposed as schools under the management of the Dissenters. In the discussion which followed, the motion supported by the Bishop and opposed by the Lord Redesdale. It was ultimately carried by 49 against 16.

THE JEWISH DIVORCE LAW NOT BINDING.—The case of Davis v. Harris was argued before the House of Lords on the 10th inst.

Steen's Court, London, on the 17th inst., for the purpose of recovering a sum of £100,000, the defendant had been separated from the plaintiff, and he had been sued in this Court on a previous occasion, a verdict having passed against him. The defendant now said that in consequence of misconduct of his wife he had been banished from his home. — His Honor: You have not pleaded adultery; and, besides, a bankrupt is bound to support his wife. — His Honor: What is the defence? — The defendant: It is a divorce according to law. — His Honor: That will not do in this Court. — The defendant: My wife is now under bail for her life. Here is the agreement under seal, and I have been divorced. — Upon his oath the agreement he pronounced it worthily.
